Developments in the Senate today were decidedly discouraging to those who hoped for the unconditional repeal of the Sherman law. The introduction by Sanator Voorhees of an increased currency bill and its reference to a committee of which he is chairman indicates that the finance committee will irrst seek relief in commending the issue of national bank notes to the par value of bonds deposited, and that the questions of free coinage and repeal of the Sherman act will be relagated to the future for more leisurely consideration.

The WYork that had said a word against the annihilation and destraction of half the money of the country and that showed that either the sentiment of New York on the subject of silver was changed ing or the Recorder was a very brave paper.

Senator Hoar gave notice that tomorrow he will cail up the resolution as to the Montana senatorial case, andwould, after Wednesday, press it to a conclusion.

Senator Vest then addressed the Senate on his resolutions in favor of bimetallism and the free coinage of gold and silver. He likened the Sherman act to a "houseless and homeless dog" without a kennel to hide its dishonored head, but declared that he would not vote for its repeal without a guarantee for silver as a money metal. Mr. Cleveland accepted the nomination on a platform which pledges the Democratic party to bi-metallism. He did not undertake to say now that the president's message was most significant to easy with the greatest respect for the president and without the slightest didn't of his honesty of purpose that when he failed to say one word in respect to bi-metallism be certainly meant that a consideration of the question of the free coinage of silver at any ratio was so impracticable that it did not need executive notice.

As to the assection that silver should be demonetized because it fluctuated in value while that of gold was stable, he read an extract from what he called a "remarkable pamphiet," written by Mouteith Douglass, a business man of London, befor the closing of the Indian mints, pleading with the people of Great Britain to favor bimetallism as the only sure foundation for financial existence, and declaring that silver really fluctuated much less than gold. It was not over production of silver that brought down its value. It was legislation. Legislation in Germany and the United States. How could it be expected that silver would retain its value when those two great nations took away the monetary use of silver? With the resources and population of the United States it was only necessary for the United States it was only necessary for the United States it was only necessary for the United States to fix a policy and stand by it. The trouble today was caused by the open and seditous inculcation of the idea that the country was about to go to a gold standard and that the silver money of the country would be worthless. No, Mr. President, I will not do it."

In conclusion Senator Vest repelled the idea of there being a necessity for an in-ternational agreement on the subject of silver. At the close of his speech Mr. Hoar obtained the floor and the Senate will be considerably improved this week by money sinking to its normal value. The premium paid for use of currency is dragging money from its hiding places, and during the coming week more cur-rency will be issued on bonds deposited by banks than in the same period of time for many years. The currency was in-creased by this method during July $5,-000,000, and more than this amount has been issued already in August. When to this the $20,000,000 gold from abroad are added, there is certainly strong grounds to hope for relief.

At this point a national bank note bill was introduced by Senator Voorhees, that man of the Finance Committee. Accompanying the bill was a letter from Secretary Carliste, saying in part:

"The enactment of such a law would enable the national banks to issue and put in circulation at once on the bonds aready deposited with the treasurer, about $19,000,000 in currency in addition to the amount now authorized and this in my opinion would afford a very considerable measure of relief to the country under existing circumstances."

Senator Mitchell (Republican) of Oregon gave notice of an amendment to be offered to the joint resolution to maintain the parity of gold and silver. The amendment, after a long preamble, declares that it is the sense of Congress that on change be made in the tariff laws during the Fifty-third Congress.

Senator Vest, Democrat, of Missouri, introduced a bill for the coinage of silver builtion in the treasury, saying it was sent him from New York and met his partial approval. It provides (after setting saide in coin and builton purchased under the act of July, 1890, as shall equal at coinage value the aggregate is sum of treasury notes authorized by that act) that all the remainder of such builton shall be deemed available for the issue of silver certificates; such remainder of the surplus builtion to be coined into standard interest coined into standard inte took them to the third floor, whence with much difficulty they escaped to a building of similar height next door. When taken from the roof by the firemen they told them of the other child in the burning building, but save up hope of seeing her building, but gave up hope of seeing her alive.

The firemen made a rush for the front of the building with ladders and in a few minutes brought the girl out safe, with the exception of slight burns and lung trouble, caused by inhaiation of the smoke. The firemen say the place was the worst kind of a fire trap. Owing to the fact that it was but three stories high the law did not compel the owners to put fire escapes on the building, and this fact is accountable for most of the loss of life.
